Cineworld is first part of a bigger picture for Dover

The skeleton of Dover's new giant cinema is taking shape.

Builders are putting together the framework of the six-screen Cineworld, part of the major St James' retail and leisure development in Dover.

It will be the biggest boost for the town's cinemagoers for decades. While there were countless cinemas scattered around Dover in the mid-20th century these were gone by the 1980s, and since the 90s there has only been the Silver Screen at Market Square to watch the latest blockbusters.

The development, off Town-wall Street, will also have a hotel, restaurants and shops.

Tenants so far confirmed included M&S, Travelodge, Nandos, Bella Italia and Frankie and Benny's.

Work is currently being carried out by construction firm Gallagher, which is also clearing land and laying foundations.

A main contractor is expected to be announced in the coming weeks. The chosen firm will be tasked with finishing most of the work by the end of the year.

Dover and Deal MP Charlie Elphicke was given a tour of the building site by workers from Dover District Council and developer Bond City.

The site once had the office tower block Burlington House, branded Dover's ugliest building and was knocked down by last February.

Mr Elphicke said: "After years of waiting, Burlington House was demolished. This was a huge victory – a symbol of how things are changing."

"It was incredible to see how much progress has been made."

"The starting gun has well and truly been fired on the renewal of Dover."
